Robert Hallauk (from Arviat)

Arviat, formerly called Eskimo Point, is the most southern community in Nunavut. The carvers use a rough, local stone called steatite. The sculptures are probably the least naturalistic of all Inuit Art, with little surface detail. While work from this community may appear crude, it has considerable emotional power.

2005
Photography
43" x 62"

VARLEY
Art Gallery of Markham

24 June – 28 August, 2011

Curated by Maria Coates, Karie Liao, and Fiona Wright

Organized in collaboration with the Art History Graduate Student Association of York University

Cul-de-sac is a group exhibition featuring contemporary photography, video and sculpture. The works selected by the three curators from York University invite the public to revisit the idea of suburbia and examine its failures, successes, paradoxes and contradictions.
